New Recovery Highs Brings A Possible Negative Divergence

The stock market corrected for about a month, ending in early February. It has since rallied back up in March. It is now at recovery highs. The chart below shows the movements.

Before the market entered its correction, everything was in gear to the upside.

That is the good news. The potential bad news now, however, is that the Dow Industrials is lagging this rally. The S&P 500, NASDAQ Composite, Russell 2000, Dow Transports have all made recovery highs, but the one key ingredient is missing. The Industrials are still some 100 points away from joining the crowd.

This may not sound like a big deal, but having invested for many years, I have learned this is not something to be ignored.

What can it mean?

It does not necessarily

The chart is the daily S&P 500 with blue smoothed line an 80-day moving average. The spikes are possible trading signals.

WEEKLY REVIEW and PREVIEW

If the stock market begins to correct from its current negative divergence, I anticipate that bonds will react positively.

So, in the Portfolio, I am selling the money market (cash equivalent) and buying TIP.

After buying PHB (high yield fund) all the way down on its correction, it looks like it is time to take some profits there. I'll sell half the position.

With $25,000 of the proceeds, I will add to my BSV (short-term bond fund) position.

Income Charts

PHB—high yield ETF.

After buying all the way down on its correction, it is time to take some profits on the rally.

TIP—inflation protection ETF.

Not much activity.

BSV— short-term bond

Each chart shows daily prices (top portion), volume (bottom portion), a moving average (smoothed line on price portion, and red spikes. The spikes show potential places to buy and sell short. If the moving average is trending down, the spike shows a potential sell short. If the moving average is trending up, the spike shows a potential buy. The charts do not show selling or covering signals.

WEEKLY REVIEW

Given the potential of the negative divergence in the domestic stock market, I'll take profits in PWO.

I'll also short two new ETFs that are in down trends, but have rallied back to resistance areas.

The two columns to the left show the rankings of the equity oriented ETFs in our database through the previous Friday's close.

These rankings are based on momentum indicators around which we generally want to trade. Our general strategy is to invest with the stronger performing ETFs by investing with the main trend and against the minor trend down. This means that in a bear (down) market, we want to short the funds that rally against their main trend downward. In a bull market, we want to buy during selloffs with the main trend up.

mean the final top is in place, but another period of backing and filling appears ahead. There should be a pullback.

So, rather than chase things here, a take-profits attitude might be the way to approach things with the idea that again on the correction, we want to accumulate.

On the correction, the places to watch for support are previous low areas. The market must not drop below those points, else serious problems would be suggested.

So, for now, we'll keep a close eye on things and move cautiously.

PORTFOLIO DESCRIPTIONS (pages 2 and 3)

Our guiding goal is to provide the most return with the least risk consistently over time through bull and bear markets.

Income Portfolio, page2: Uses a proprietary selection methodology on all of the monitored bond-oriented ETFs to pick the top ETFs. I then use a proprietary timing model to decide whether to buy, sell, hold, or avoid.

Growth Portfolio, page 3: Uses the same methodologies as in the Income Portfolio, except as it is applied to stock-oriented ETFs.

All portfolios were started on 1/1/10 with $100,000.

Portfolio changes will usually be made at the close on Monday, unless otherwise noted in any emailed hotline update. Issues are normally posted on Mondays by 1:30pm est.

Portfolios are updated through the Friday close the week before.

Dividends are reinvested in additional shares. Commissions of $5/trade and short-term redemption charges, if any, are applied.

Interest is zero for the money market (cash) position.
