2 Steps Forward and 1 Step Back

With last Friday's big drop, perhaps the test of the recent correction lows set earlier this month may be underway.

As you can see on the chart, the success or failure will be critical in determining whether the bull market has tuned into a bear market on a longer-term basis. This is so because of the lower highs and lower lows intermediate-term pattern that the market has set up. It failed to make recovery highs on last week's rally. This sets up the possibility that if the market makes new lows here, then the major trend will have reversed from up to down.

In turn this sets up another longer-term issue.

If the bull market peaked and terminated in April, 2010, it will not have made an all-time recovery high. This implies that

The chart shows the daily S&P 500 with red smoothed line an 80-day moving average and orange line a relative comparison to the bond market. The lower part shows blue volume and red spikes as possible trading signals.

WEEKLY REVIEW and PREVIEW

No changes this week.

Income Charts

PHB—high yield ETF.

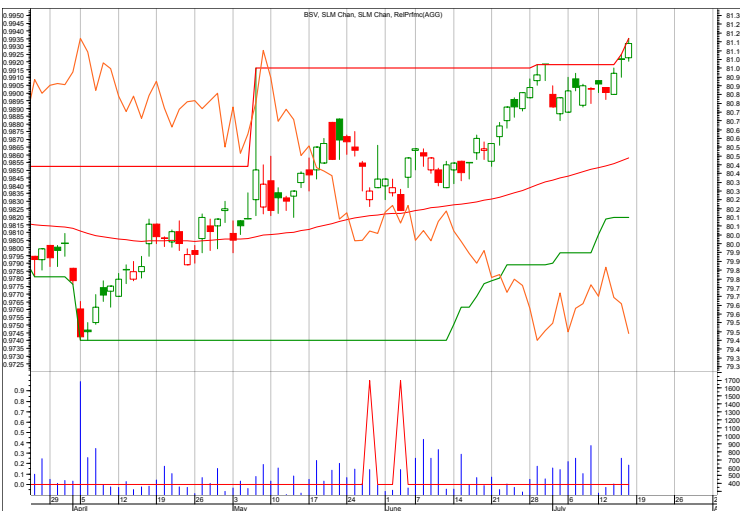

Reiteration—

After coming up to its target, PHB has pulled back. I expect the support line to hold and for PHB to resume its rally.

TIP—Treasury inflation protection

What inflation? With its underperformance relative to AGG (aggregate bond index), TIP suggests no worries.

BSV—short term bonds

Short term bonds continue to rally and yields fall as worries over a possible double-dip recession intensify.

The price is above and yields below where they were at the peak of the financial crisis.

The other way of looking at this, however, is that stocks are relatively cheap.

WEEKLY REVIEW

Short two positions today as noted.

I've also added a few stop positions. If it looks like an ETF will close above (for shorts) or below (for longs) the stop price, then cover or sell your ETF that day toward the close. Use the price at quarter to the close to determine.

See performance rankings of the equity oriented ETFs on page six.

Growth Charts

FXI-China

Remaining bullish for now.

EWI

Expecting weakness.

ICF—REIT

Each chart shows daily prices (top portion), volume (bottom portion), a moving average (smoothed red line on price portion), a relative performance indicator between the ETF and S&P 500 (orange line), and red spikes. The spikes show potential buy and sell short signals. Generally speaking, if the moving average is trending down, the spike shows a potential sell short. If the moving average is trending up, but the ETF declines, the spike shows a potential buy. The charts do not show selling or covering signals.

The two columns to the left show the rankings of the equity oriented ETFs in our database through the previous Friday's close.

These rankings are based on momentum indicators around which we generally want to trade. Our general strategy is to invest with the stronger performing ETFs by investing with the main trend and against the minor trend down. This means that in a bear (down) market, we want to short the funds that rally against their main trend downward. In a bull market, we want to buy during selloffs with the main trend up.

the lows of March, 2009 will be taken out to the downside, if the bear market unfolds. That's 6500 on the Dow Industrials. It is around 10,100 now.

This would be similar to the Japanese situation of the Eighties where their market went sideways to down for years.

The connecting feature between them and us is deflation. Asset values never recovered, while the expectation that they would persisted.

So, the market is pausing here as it ponders the possibility of another recession, the weakness in housing and lending and anemic job growth.

It'll make for some interesting times ahead. Buy and hold is dead. Trading the main trend is still the way to approach the markets.

Descriptions & Disclosures

PORTFOLIO DESCRIPTIONS (pages 2 and 3)

Our guiding goal is to provide the most return with the least risk consistently over time through bull and bear markets.

Income Portfolio, page2: Uses a proprietary selection methodology on all of the monitored bond-oriented ETFs to pick the top ETFs. I then use a proprietary timing model to decide whether to buy, sell, hold, or avoid.

Growth Portfolio, page 3: Uses the same methodologies as in the Income Portfolio, except as it is applied to stock-oriented ETFs.

All portfolios were started on 1/1/10 with $100,000.

Portfolio changes will usually be made at the close on Monday, unless otherwise noted in any emailed hotline update. Issues are normally posted on Mondays by 1:30pm est.

Portfolios are updated through the Friday close the week before.

Dividends are reinvested in additional shares. Commissions of $5/trade and short-term redemption charges, if any, are applied.

Interest is zero for the money market (cash) position.
