Broader Market

For a little bit different perspective on the breadth of the market, instead of showing the chart of the Dow Jones Industrial and Transportation Indexes below, I am showing the Dow Industrials (blue line) and NYSE Advance

Decline line (red line).

As you can see, unlike the Industrials and Transports that simultaneously made new highs a few weeks ago, the Advance Decline line peaked prior to the new highs in the Dow Industrials. This is a negative divergence that bears watching.

Confirmation of a trend change from bullish to bearish, however, won't take place until both drop below their lows set in June, which is prior to the current divergence. The Dow

REVIEW since last issue

8/26 No changes.

8/19 Completed the sell of SILU. GENC may have begun its own breakout with my long-term target still north of $12/share. No new recommendations at this time.

8/12 No changes. The downside risk is increasing. We will be monitoring areas to take profits.

8/5 No changes.

7/29 SILU merged with SII (Canadian listing only). Shareholders received 1/2 share in SII for each share of SILU plus 0.15 cash. Based on today's rates, I have sold all of SILU/SII for a small loss.

7/22 No changes. It is nice to see GENC perhaps getting a little market recognition as the shares rally.

Back of the envelope analysis shows that its market cap of $72 million (price of $7.60 times number of shares outstanding 9.5 million) is still below its net cash in the bank ($87 million). Add in the business value and it is still the cheapest stock out there.

7/15 No changes.

For this portfolio, we seek to outperform the Dow Industrials using proprietary timing and weighting formulas of the underlying thirty stocks of the Dow Industrials. We also will use the ETF that tracks the same. The symbol is DIA.

We monitor the underlying individual stocks for buys and sells in order to overweight the portfolio to what is expected to outperform and underweight the portfolio with what is expected to underperform.

REVIEW since last issue

8/26 No changes.

8/19 As mentioned in the front page article, the risk is increasing with the market's failure to sustain its recent breakout. So, no new purchases at this time.

8/12 No changes.

Feature Company

None this month.

Industrials hit lows around 14,550.

In addition to this, I'm showing the percentage of ETFs above their 35-week moving average on page 5.

As you can see, the percentage of ETFs above their 35-week moving average is declining, even though the stock market as measured by the SPY is hitting new highs.

So, technically speaking, things are beginning to weaken internally.

On a fundamental basis, the economy continues to chug along, not too hot and not too cold. The unemployment rate is still coming down, while inflation remains muted about 2%.

Most likely, therefore, the Fed will begin its taper program next month. This is simply giving the stock market an excuse to grow cautious. The market does not like uncertainty. The big question is whether the economy can self-sustain if the Fed pulls back. As more and more work comes out that quantitative easing effects have diminished over time, the economy should continue to plod along.

So, stocks may be in for a correction, but the underlying economy should continue to expand. This would reduce the market's overvaluation and provide further support for it in the months ahead.

For our purposes, this means the number of very "cheap" stocks relative to their earnings or balance sheet has been shrinking. In the months ahead, however, if we get the expected pullback that results from the negative divergences, the pool of interesting stocks should fill back up and provide more choices than present currently.

Please see the individual portfolio pages for any changes.

Analysis

The chart above shows that the percentage of ETFs (a basket of 35 equity ETFs) above their 35-week moving average is shrinking, even as the SPY (S&P 500 index) continues to climb. This is potentially a worrisome negative divergence.

Consider the rallies in 2006 where the SPY hit recovery highs, while the % continued to decrease. The same scenario unfolded in the summer of 2010. In both instances, the subsequent action led to a severe bear market and a sharp pullback.

So, while the “general” the SPY leads, the troops are falling behind. This bears close watching.

Descriptions & Disclosures

PORTFOLIO DESCRIPTIONS (pages 2 and 3)

Our guiding goal is to provide the most return with the least risk.

The two portfolios were started on 1/1/10 with $100,000. Beginning in 2012 (12/31/11), the official portfolio for measuring the newsletter performance is the Stock Portfolio only.

Portfolio changes will usually be made at the close on Monday (the day this eNewsletter is posted), or if a position is stopped out, the close that day, unless otherwise noted.

Portfolios are updated through the preceding Friday's close.

Stock dividends are paid in cash. Interest is assumed to be zero for the money market (cash) position. Commission costs to buy and sell are assumed to be $10.00 per trade.

The S&P 500 TR (total return) includes dividend reinvestment.
